Drayton rumbles with horsepower

Lesley Allan Western Review

Thousands of spectators and hundreds of participants headed out to the Drayton Valley Municipal Airport for the 10th annual Thunder in the Valley Drag Race event, which took place Aug. 29 to 31. Organized in partnership with the Rotary Club of Drayton Valley and the Northern Thunder Classic Car Club, the event proved to be a hit right off the start line and has only grown over the last decade. Policy sent back for another look

Neighbourhood
rinks policy
tabled for tweaks

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

A proposed policy that sets out regulations for neighbourhood ice rinks on public property, including prohibiting hockey, didn't find favour with town councillors last week.

The proposed Neighbourhood Outdoor Skating Rinks Policy would set out parameters for the creation and maintenance of neighbourhood skating rinks for residents interested in building them. If the policy had been approved, stormwater management ponds would no longer be cleared for public use.

As presented last week the policy would require a group of five adult volunteers to enter into an agreement with the Town of Drayton Valley prior to an outdoor rink being permitted.

The Town of Drayton Valley would provide signage and support, but the creation, operation and maintenance of the rink and associated expenses would be the responsibility of the group applying for the rink. The policy in front of council last week also stipulated that rinks would be for skating only, no hockey or hockey equipment was to be allowed. Last week councillors expressed some concerns over the draft policy.

Councillor Nicole Nadeau said she had seen a number of concerns from the community after information about the proposed policy was posted on the Western Review's Facebook page.

"I see a number of concerns about not allowing hockey on the rinks," noted Coun. Debra Bisset.

Many around the council table also expressed disappointment over losing the use of stormwater ponds for winter recreation.

Director of Community Services Annette Driessen said that piece was included in the policy because of the safety risk and liability associated with the use of the ponds. Ponds weren't cleared for public use.

"I think this is too hard-lined," said Nadeau. "I understand where we're coming from, but I feel there's no balance."

Nadeau read out a text she had received from a concerned resident who was unable to attend the meeting.

Coun. Graham Long also expressed concern that the list of requirements residents need to abide by would be too onerous for those interested in providing a place for neighbourhood children to skate.

Coun. Dean Shular noted that when he had previously looked over the policy at a governance and priorities meeting, where councillors receive and discuss items prior to them coming to council for decision, he hadn't seen a problem. However, after reviewing it again he saw some areas he thought could be adjusted.

"I'd like to see this actually go back to administration and be reworked," he said.

Driessen said administration will look at the policy again to see where changes can be made. "How do we make this policy more reflective of what the community wants," she said of what the consideration will be when changing the document. Long presented a tabling motion for the policy, which was approved by his colleagues.

Curling rink should be open next month

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

With sky still visible where a portion of the curling rink roof collapsed last winter, it might not seem like curlers will be back at it anytime soon, however the Town of Drayton Valley is anticipating the facility will be ready to go by next month.

Last week Town of Drayton Valley Assistant Town Manager Neesen Naidoo said steel work necessary to replace the section of the roof was expected to arrive this week. Once that is in place the contractor is estimating repairs to Omni III should be completed by the end of September.

A portion of the roof over the curling sheets collapsed last January, putting an end to the curling season and closing Omni III to the public. No one was hurt in the collapse, which had been determined to be a result of snow weight. Costs to replace the roof, as well as other damage caused by the collapse, including flooding and water damage, are being covered by the town's insurance. All other repair work was completed earlier this year.

Word is that once the infrastructure is in place to replace the portion of roof, it won't be long to finish the project.

The project manager has stated once the roof gets on the other items will only be a matter of weeks," said Naidoo.

That's good news for the Drayton Valley Curling Club. While their facility has been out of commission since the end of January, the club has been busy recovering and repairing damage to its equipment. Curling rocks that were exposed to the elements before being able to be removed have been refurbished and Mike Landry, curling club president, said they are expected to be back next week. Mats are being reprinted and are expected to be ready by the end of September, to coincide with the estimated completion date.

"We're looking to business as usual this year," said Landry last week. "Pretty much as soon as they turn on the refrigeration we're ready for business as usual."

The curling club already has a full complement of bonspiels scheduled for this season, including the two-man bonspiel mid-November.

Throughout the process Landry said the curling club and the Town of Drayton Valley have maintained good lines of communication so the curling club was aware of progress on their facility and anticipated completion dates. The Drayton Valley Curling Club will be in attendance at next week's community registration night at the MacKenzie Conference Centre to sign curlers up for leagues and answer any questions.

Bus hub to stay at Eldorado

WRSD bus hub continues to operate from Eldorado school

Lesley Allan
Western Review

School is back in session and for students that use Wild Rose School Division's (WRSD) busing system things are just as they have been for the last four years.

The school division's bus hub, where all school buses gather to load and unload students, will remain at Eldorado School.

"Fortunately it's there and it's there at Eldorado," says Gordon Majeran, acting transportation manager for WRSD. "I think the goal is to move it as quickly as we can to another location, which would be in the Evergreen School area."

Discussions between the school division and the Town of Drayton Valley have been ongoing and earlier this year WRSD submitted a development permit application with hopes of having the new bus hub ready for September.

According to the town's planning department the permit is in discussions but nothing has been approved.

"Currently we're just in discussions with them, nothing concrete has been agreed to so it probably will be there for the next year," shares Majeran.

"I know a tentative plan has been drawn up as to what it could look like, and then another plan came along as to what it could look like and both are in opposition to each other, so it's a matter of deciding what's going to happen there," he adds.

Despite the slow process Majeran says he still hopes that approval will come sooner rather than later and that work will be able to begin on the long awaited site.

"I wouldn't hold any hope for it changing in this year, but we're working on it and as soon as an agreement is reached we will begin the work," he says.

A call to Drayton Valley Mayor Glenn McLean for comment was not returned before press time last week.

Council turns down development

Courtney Whalen
Western Review

A proposed development off of 50 Ave. didn't get very far last week after councillors refused to go to second reading on the necessary amendment to the Annex Area Structure Plan (ASP).

The ASP would have required amendment to allow for the development of three lots on a 1.2 acre parcel of land located at 3720 50 Ave., adjacent to the Glenbow subdivision.

First reading of the ASP amendment and accompanying rezoning application to allow for medium density development instead of the currently permitted estate residential was given in April. After that the developer held an open house for residents.

Last week's public hearing included a package containing nine letters of opposition from area residents, as well as a petition containing 24 signatures. Many residents were also in the council chambers to express opposition. Although the developer was not present a letter was circulated from John Alshabli where he expressed his opinions about the need for the higher density housing.

Mayor Glenn McLean recalled himself from public hearing due to a conflict of interest. Coun. Dean Shular and Coun. Nancy McClure were also absent for the public hearing, rendering them unable to vote on the applications later in the meeting.

Concerns expressed by residents at the public hearing included adding more traffic to an already busy 50 Ave. corridor, the impact on property values and the maintenance of the property. Several also noted that a similar proposal had been turned down by council approximately two years ago.

Resident Nicole Elbert-Barton told councillors that landowners aren't currently maintaining the vacant property and that was one of her concerns.

"It's that we want quality, and guarantees of quality," she said. She also expressed concern that advertising about the application by the Town of Drayton Valley had included errors, including the number of units being applied for.

Resident Frank Newberry was especially concerned about the increased traffic. The road is already busy with heavy vehicle and pedestrian traffic, especially during school hours, he noted.

In my opinion the Town of Drayton Valley should rename 50th (Ave.) to the Yellowhead," he said.

chambers at the conclusion of the public hearing and weren't present later in the meeting when the item came back for a council decision.

In light of the concerns expressed by residents Coun. Debra Bossett made the motion to refuse to go to second reading for the ASP amendment. The four councillors eligible to vote unanimously supported it.

"It is very clear to me, based on the feedback from the area residents that the developer has not taken the residents' concerns into consideration," said Bossett.

Both Coun. Graham Long and Coun. Nicole Nadeau chided the developer for not addressing their main concerns with the proposal. However, Nadeau noted that contrary to the belief expressed by some to the public hearing council had not indicated upgrades to 50 Ave. would be completed when the development proposal was in previously front of them.

Long and Nadeau also both said they were disappointed at some of the sentiments expressed in residents' letters where it came to lower-income, higher density housing and the types of people who might live there.

A subsequent application to rezone the property was refused as well, meaning the development can't proceed as planned.

Rink policy a prime opportunity for public engagement

The response on the Western Review's Facebook page last week is any indication, members of the public have a lot of opinions about a proposed policy by the Town of Drayton Valley.

The Neighbourhood Outdoor Skating Rink Policy sets out regulations for the creation, operation and maintenance of outdoor rinks on public property by community members. Among the stipulations of the proposed policy that was in front of councillors last week is the prohibition of hockey on neighbourhood rinks and a list of requirements for community members who want to create ice surfaces in their area.

Last week councillors expressed some concern over aspects of the policy and tabled it so administration could re-examine it and bring a revised document back in front of them.

Town councillors have expressed a desire to increase community engagement with residents. This policy is a perfect opportunity to do just that. However, community engagement works far better if it is done prior to a prepared document being brought in front of council for approval. There has been interest expressed in outdoor rinks for a number of years, so it is logical to assume there is a public interest in the issue. Community engagement prior to drafting the policy could have helped shape the document and address some of the areas that are now causing concern.

Councillors, with the exception of those away on holidays, had the chance to see the proposed policy prior to last week. It would have been presented at the so-called governance and priorities meeting. That may have been a good time to suggest the document could benefit from some community input. It is then up to community members, once given the chance, to make their thoughts known.

Of particular concern in the proposed policy is the prohibition of hockey and hockey equipment from any neighbourhood rinks established on public property. A suggestion that hockey enthusiasts be encouraged to use the Olympics, which comes with a cost, isn't centrally located and is tightly scheduled, doesn't make sense as an option for informal games of pick-up or practicing skills with a parent, siblings or friends.

Now that the policy has been tabled, residents with concerns have a short window of time to express their thoughts to their councillors — they should take it. Council members will be in attendance at the community engagement night being held at the MacKenzie Conference Centre on Sept. 9 from 6:30-8:30 p.m.

Things that go bump in the night

This week's tale begins on a dark and stormy night. All right, I may have taken some creative licence there. It wasn't stormy and the yard lights actually provided quite a lot of illumination, but it was definitely night and I was alone.

Tues. It was night and I was alone! I also set an appropriately eerie tone, with the added bonus of being an accurate description of my personal life in general.

So, here we go. It was night and I was alone. I had been asked to take on house-sitting responsibilities, while the owners were away for a week and I had accepted, happy to engage in a fantasy that allowed me to live out the dream that I would ever be able to have a house of my own. I arrived with bags in tow and began to settle in for my week-long stay.

Admittedly, it was strange to be in the house by myself. It's a house that is generally a gathering place, with any number of people popping in and out. There never even been there when the only sound was my own voice and the rather vocal protests of the cat once I began singing.

Initial settling in complete, I headed aigh and plucked myself down for an evening filled with a whole lot of nothing. However,

There and Back
Courtney Whalen

with my singing silenced and the cat still in hiding, where I sat in a particularly high note, and dark, turning to dark, things took a turn.

Every house has its own quirks and noises. They are such a part of your own home you don't even notice them. In someone else's house every noise that isn't immediately identifiable suddenly warrants a nervous investigation.

What results in numerous checks to ensure the door is locked and a decision that, despite being a firm believer in conserving energy, a little more light and then perhaps just a little bit more, wouldn't be amiss.

At a certain point I gave myself a stern look in the mirror with an admonishment to stop being ridiculous. Suitably soothed by the little bit of logic I possess, I once again sat down for some mindless television viewing. Of course every other show seemed to be about paranormal fits or sadistic serial killers. That, deciding reading is far better for the brain, I finally seemed to have a handle on the situation by being suitably disarmed by the exploits of the chess actors on the page.

Until it was time to turn in. As I began the arduous process of switching off all the lights, I had turned on earlier logic revealed a little further with each flick of the light switch. Despite overt being a fan of the genre the plots of the few horror movies I have seen started running through my mind. Attempts to turn my thoughts to meadows full of wildflowers and frolicking unicorns were futile. The only recourse available to me was to turn out that final light and sprint for the bedroom, where I could cocoon myself under the blankets and find my way to a mental place where I was able to blame every unkindled noise on the cat and not something that would lead to the "bass" based on actual events on a movie screen.

As evidenced by the writing of this column, I survived and with that triumph under my belt I was able to face the remainder of the week with fewer lights and far more optimism.

In our world today we have girls who are kidnapped or their lives are threatened simply because they want to better their lives and they want to better the lives of

An auction is a very emotional experience, heart wrenching, tear jerking. Up for the highest bidder — someone always wins.

We have been to several other auctions over the years. For what ever reason there was something that tweaked our interest. Whether it is a material item or the social event itself, it is exciting to go to — the auction.

This is our firsthand experience to an auction 'up close and personal'. Have an auction they said — get rid of all you junk, stuff and things, our "things". All our "things" have a story and we remember where it came from, why and who gave us such a lovely thing.

An auction — seemed like a good idea at the time.

Over the course of 46 years we had become collectors, collectors of many "fine" things and collections of several items of character, character that seemed to match ourselves, characteristics that told our story. Oh man — there was a lot of stuff — a lot more than a lot that fit into their lives. People we knew, friends and family. People came to support our endeavor, just to say "hello" and hold our hand. Holding our hand, holding our hearts and giving us a hug helped us through that day and the days to come. Every one was graciously wonderful.

I had to walk away a couple of three or more times, holding back the tears, not successfully — thinking of where and when that "stuff" came into our lives, what wonderful person gave it to us or the story behind that item. Yes the stories — stories of another time.

New stories will be made and new treasures will be saved.

Thank you one and for your support, kind words, and love.

Welcome back to your privilege

What would you do in order to be able to attend school? Not college or university, just a basic education that in a perfect world would be available to everyone.

Would you walk through mounds of garbage? Cross a river with no bridge? Sit under a heavily travelled bridge and learn in a makeshift classroom?

I won't deny that as a child I wasn't always thrilled to get up and go to school, mainly because I have never been a morning person even to this day, but for the most part I have enjoyed school and always saw it as a way to achieve success in life.

And for many who do not have it this simple chance is desperately wanted.

From war to countries, to impoverished communities abroad and right here in our own backyard, the cycle of suffering continues because generation after generation grows up with an education, limited education, or an education system that does not do them justice.

Currently it is estimated that approximately 93 million children are not attending school, and holding you back from doing what you want, but just consider how limited your life can be if you don't at least finish high school.

Yes there are careers where even people without high school diplomas can get work, but they are limited and becoming more and more so as companies continue to increase their expectations for their family and their communities.

Lesley's Lessons

Meanwhile, we have girls in our own country, likely in our own community, who cut class to be cool.

Obviously it isn't only females that are skipping class to hang out and waste time, it's a non-gender specific issue, but nonetheless discouraging to see when you think about the privilege that comes with being a Canadian, and especially one that is part of a family and community that has access to an education system like ours.

I understand that school can be boring and at times it can feel like it is limiting your freedom and holding you back from doing what you want, but just consider how limited your life can be if you don't at least finish high school.

Yes there are careers where even people without high school diplomas can get work, but they are limited and becoming more and more so as companies continue to increase their expectations for employees.

But it isn't even just the educational aspect, or intelligence side of the coin that is important, according to Stats Canada, 42 per cent of Canadians aged 16-65 do not have the minimum literacy skills for coping with everyday life and work.

School does not just give you the book smarts to succeed, but also the necessary communication, interpersonal and coping skills necessary to help you live life. In school you learn about relationships, you learn about failure, you learn about hard work and determination... Or at least you used to.

As important as these skills are it seems the expectations of education systems to teach them are fading and slowly we are becoming a society that pushes our children through without properly preparing them.

Did Sally or Johnny not pass? Find out why it happened. If it's learning disability work with it and help them fight it. If it was laziness fail them, hold them back, punish them, but do not push them through. Nothing is learned, education is wasted and taken for granted when that happens.

Children and communities around the world are fighting and dying for education to improve their lives, don't let your children and community become the one that wastes what is available and mocks their efforts and struggles.

I think of an eye-flick, (0.20) years have gone by and we find ourselves wondering where all the years have gone. One minute we have a newborn baby in our arms then the next minute they are crawling, walking, getting into kindergarten, high school, college, getting married and having babies of their own. Someone once told me that it's just the circle of life, that the things are intended to go. Maybe so, but I don't make these transitions any easier.

This year is filled with huge transitions in my family. We have one of our children moving away and heading off to college and our youngest starting kindergarten this year. I find myself wishing that I could turn back time, just to have more time with them, to savour these precious moments just a little longer, but of course this can't be so. Life does have to continue on and they need to carry on with all the exciting things that life has in store for them. Just as my parents had to do for me and their parents had to do for them.

Along with these transitions in our lives, our relationships with our children change as well. As they start to become their own person, apart from who they are at home, we get to know a new person. The changes our children go through during these transitions, helps them to find more independence, discover new interests and slowly get prepared for their own lives, and what it is like to be on their own. It is sometimes difficult as a parent to see these changes happen, but can be exciting as well. Seeing our children succeed and grow is an honour for us to be part of.

So what am I going to do to get through these transitions? I am going to get my kindergarten excited to start school and not show how I make them a little sad to see him grow up. Although getting him excited will not be difficult, since each day he asks me how many more days until he starts. What about my child going to college? I am going to watch with excitement and pride as the ventures out on her own, and discovers more about herself and what direction life is going to lead her. My second child at home? I am going to savour these last few years. I have with her, before she also ventures out on her own and starts her own life adventure. Transition and change can be a challenge for many of us, depending on what the change may be. A new job, a move of a loved one, a new school, and children leaving home can bring about many emotions.

If you know someone going through a transition in their life, check in on them, offer support if needed, your compassion may be just the thing to make the transition in their life a little easier.

Around the water cooler...

Happy first week of school! Classes are back in, lovers are starting to turn colour and the crisp nights heralding autumn have arrived.

The official start to fall might not be for another few weeks, but the calendar is already showing things getting back into the regular routine after summer.

But before we get to some of those events we need to pass on some big birthday wishes to Erin St. Louis who celebrates on Sept. 3, a fabulous day, lady!

We also want to wish Julie Spicer-Ries many happy returns when she blows out her candles on Sept. 6. Don't forget, you can always submit your birthday or anniversary wishes for inclusion in the water cooler. Just e-mail the info to courtney.whalen@sunmedia.ca or call 780-542-5380.

Now let's highlight some events coming up this week!

The Boys and Girls Club of Drayton Valley is starting its programming this fall and is guaranteed to be an excellent addition to services in our area. While things are starting to get busy for the organization they want to take some time out to thank everyone who has supported them so far. That includes sponsors, donors, supporters, parents, children and the whole community. To accomplish that they're hosting a free barbecue from 6-8 p.m. on Sept. 4 in Rotary Park. Come down and enjoy some free eats courtesy of Secure Energy Services and meet those involved in the Boys and Girls Club of Drayton Valley.

This weekend the Drayton Valley Lions Club will once again be hosting its annual Support the Local Santa's Anonymous Toy Run in support of the local Santa's Anonymous. The event is open to all riders and spectators and donations of toys or money will be accepted. Registration starts at 9:30 a.m. at Scotty's Eno and comes with a $10 fee. The poker run portion of the event gets underway at 10:30 a.m. For more information contact Trevor at 780-514-9209.

If your child is interested in finding out more about ringette, this weekend is the chance to do it. Drayton Valley Ringette is hosting a free on-ice event for children five years and over. Skates and helmets are required to take part. These interested must pre-register between 12:30 and 1 p.m. on Sept. 7. The on-ice session runs from 1-2 p.m. You can register online by going to www.comereringette.ca. Be sure to check out our community events on pg. 42 for more upcoming events in the area.

Looks like that's all the room we have this week.

Have a superbly easy start to September.

BIKE STOLEN AFTER MAN STOPS TO GIVE DIRECTIONS
A man's good deed was not rewarded recently after he stopped to help a pedestrian.

Last week RCMP Cpl. Marco Lou said police had received a complaint from a man after his bicycle was stolen. He had been stopped by an intoxicated man asking for directions to a local hotel. After giving the directions he was punched and knocked to the ground. The suspect then took the bicycle.

Police were contacted and located the suspect at the hotel in possession of the bicycle.

WOMAN CAUGHT ATTEMPTING TO RETURN STOLEN ITEM
A woman was arrested after she was caught returning an item she hadn't purchased to the local Wal-Mart.

Police said a woman entered the store, took an electronic razor off the shelf and then put it in a shopping bag. She then went to the customer service desk and attempted to return the item without a receipt.

She was initially given a gift card for the amount of the razor, but store security then observed what had happened and the gift card was deactivated. When the woman attempted to use the gift card it wouldn't work. Police were called and she was arrested.

ENDS IN CHARGES

On Aug. 20 police responded to a complaint of a black Ford 3/4 ton truck running with the lights on. When police attended they found a man sleeping in the truck.

A check on the vehicle revealed that it was stolen. The man was charged with being in possession of the stolen vehicle.

TRAFFIC STOP LEADS TO ARREST
A traffic stop by local community peace officers (CPO) on Aug. 19 resulted in criminal charges against an individual.

After the vehicle stopped for CPOs, they contacted RCMP for additional assistance. When police arrived, a significant amount of marijuana was found. A suspect was then charged with possession of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking.

EQUIPMENT RELOCATED
AFTER BREAK-IN

A break in at the old Brazeau County jail building prompted the relocation of some fire services equipment that was being stored at the location.

On Aug. 19 police received a report that locks had been cut to gain entry to the building. Some equipment for the Drayton Valley/Brazeau County Fire Services was being stored in the building and the key for an ATV was stolen. The ATV was promptly relocated to another facility.

FOUR ARRESTED
Four people were arrested and two have been charged after an off-duty RCMP officer noticed a suspicious vehicle last month.

On Aug. 13 the member noticed a truck that had a covered licence plate. He had been stopped by a man who was intoxicated and the scene.

It was determined that the truck had been stolen out of St. Albert.

THEFT ATTEMPT FOILED
A vehicle was left near the Pembina Bridge on Hwy. 753 after thieves were unable to get it running.

When police arrived they found the ignition in the vehicle had been torn apart in an attempt to get it started. Police speculate that when the suspect was unable to get the vehicle running they took off.

THIEVES GRAB CASH
Police were able to apprehend a suspect near a cash local hotel after someone had entered the premises and grabbed money from a cash drawer.

CASH STOLEN
The office at the local landfill was broken into last month and money stolen.

The incident was reported to police on Aug. 26. The culprit(s) smashed in the back door of the facility to gain entry and then stole a quantity of cash.

VEHICLE THEFTS
REMAIN AN ISSUE

Numerous vehicle thefts were reported to police over the past few weeks.

On Aug. 17 a 1996 Eldorado was reported stolen in the area of Two Road and 660 and 670 Road. The keys for the vehicle had been left under the mat.

That same day a 2007 white Jeep Liberty was reported stolen from Two Road and 624.

A pickup truck was stolen from the parking lot of a local hotel on Aug. 19. A local offsite company reported the theft of a side-by-side from a location in Brazeau County.

Earlier in August, on Aug. 13, police received the report of the theft of a 2008 black Yamaha quad from a location north of Drayton Valley.

That same day a white Ford one-ton truck with a flat bed and slip tank was reported stolen.

As well as the theft of vehicles themselves, Drayton Valley RCMP Cpl. Marco Lou said reports are still coming in of items being stolen from vehicles. Many of those are coming from vehicles that were not secured. In some cases RCMP have been able to locate and arrest the perpetrator.

Vehicles and the items inside aren't the only things attractive to thieves operating in the area.

On Aug. 27 Alberta Transportation reported the theft of two instrumentation panels stolen from the side of the road when crews had been working.

That theft is valued at $4,000.

The previous day, on Aug. 26, a local offsite company reported the theft of approximately 365 feet of copper wire from a location on the 28 River Road.

TAKE IT TO THE RANGE
Drayton Valley RCMP have received some complaints of local archers enjoying the positive in their yards. Recently they responded to a complaint from a neighbour about a resident shooting their bows in the backyard.

Drayton Valley RCMP Cpl. Marco Lou said archery enthusiasts should contain their hobby to approved facilities, such as the Brazeau Bow Bowenders range, since the activity can pose a risk.

CT4DV campaign gets a boost from company employees

Pembina Pipeline staff make fundraising commitment

Mamta Lulla
Western Review

Still in its early stages, the CT4DV campaign is receiving attention from the community and companies in and around Drayton Valley. Pembina Pipeline recently kicked off a corporate fundraiser, held everywhere the company has field offices to support the United Way.

However, since Drayton Valley doesn't have a United Way the funds raised will go toward the purchase of a CT scanner at the Drayton Valley Hospital.

"This is a staff initiative, they thought of this plan themselves, all of them live in the community and they're all wanting to support this really, good initiative," said Drayton Valley Health Services Foundation Fund Development Officer Colleen Sekura. "We talked to all the guys in the office and asked if there were any ideas. If there's a cause that people would like to donate to because it's the participation of our staff that will help achieve the goal," said Pembina Pipeline field operator Memphina Vinbeselare. "So many of our staff members mentioned the CT scanner for the hospital after discussion that we decided that choosing the CT scanner would be the best, as it benefits everyone and it's a cause that everyone can relate to," she added.

The goal of the local field office is to raise $6,500 before the first week of December.

"This year the Drayton Valley office's goal is $6,500 dollars and then the corporate office in Calgary will match that so whatever we raise is matched and all our money raised will go to the CT scanner," said Vinbeselare.

"This is in addition to $50,000 donated by the company to kick off the CT4DV campaign earlier this summer. The campaign, which has goal of approximately $1.8 million is off to a promising start.

CT4DV was able to raise just more than $31,000 when the RCMP Musical Ride was in town, with the Penn West Charity golf tournament raising an additional $76,000.

"Certainly, every dollar raised is important, but it certainly puts the challenge out to other staff from other companies that maybe they could be doing the same thing," said Sekura.

She added that the campaign is still in its early stages. "We're a couple hundred thousand dollars in, we're very early in the campaign but you know lots of people are getting on the bandwagon now and know that this is a good project and they're really excited to be with us," said Sekura.

The campaign is starting to see a lot of personal and family donations from the community as well since an announcement at the Musical Ride saying if everyone in the community gave $127, the campaign would reach its goal.

"There are families coming in and saying, there are four people in my family, here is a cheque for $500. So that's working really well," she added.

Meanwhile, Vinbeselare said the staff has ideas in progress to reach the $6,500 goal.

She added that Pembina Pipeline will be celebrating its 60th anniversary on Oct. 3 by hosting a free community barbecue and a silent auction and the funds will go toward the CT4DV campaign.

Town of Drayton Valley council briefs

TRAFFIC ENFORCEMENT
ON ITS WAY

Later this fall, traffic enforcement in the Town of Drayton Valley will start receiving tickets in their mailboxes.

Independent Traffic Services Ltd. (ITS), which has been contracted by the town to provide automated traffic enforcement, is in the midst of its mandatory education period for residents. Warning tickets are expected to be issued starting late September or early October, with full enforcement to follow approximately a month later.

Last week Bruce Kaminski, with ITS, was in front of town councillors to talk more about the program that will be implemented locally.

One of the main areas the company will be focusing on is speed enforcement, although they also have the capability to expand that focus to include stop sign enforcement and distracted driving.

When it comes to speed enforcement ITS has personnel using laser guns to record speed sitting in unmarked vehicles in predetermined areas.

Kaminski told council it is standard for the company to work with partners including the town and local RCMP to come up with 15-20 pre-approved locations in the community where ITS can monitor for its enforcement. All locations must be approved by the commander at the local RCMP detachment. In the next month ITS will do an audit of the community, come up with a list of recommendations and then sit down with the other partners to determine the final list.

In addition to simple enforcement an education component is built in to the program, including signage. Kaminski said ITS is also open to working with schools and taking part in community safety presentations.

Once enforcement begins the company expects there will be some push back from the community, but he said a toll-free number is provided on the bottom of each ticket issued for those who have concerns.

The Town of Drayton Valley decided to contract the service to address continuing traffic concerns, especially speeding, in the community.

Kaminski said other communities where ITS is operating have seen an improvement in their traffic problems. However, he noted, it's difficult to know just how successful it is because those involved will never know about collisions that have been prevented thanks to the program.

"The best part of it is we supplement what's already going," he said, of RCMP and community peace officer enforcement that also occurs.

Areas where automated enforcement is authorized will be marked with signage.

DANGEROUS GOODS TO BE SUBJECT TO TIME RESTRICTION
Council has given first reading to an updated version of The Transportation of Dangerous Goods Bylaw.

Fire Chief Tom Thomson said he had been requested to come up with a new dangerous goods route after concerns over dangerous materials travelling right through the centre of the municipality. During the process he was also informed by Alberta Transportation that the current bylaw was outdated and didn't include key components required.

Thomson said the municipality has received complaints from residents about the transportation of dangerous goods happening in residential neighbourhoods, something that is also a concern for the fire services.

Adjustments were made accordingly. "A lot of the changes are to protect our public," said Thomson.

Among the items in the bylaw is a clause that restricts the transportation of dangerous goods on 50 St. between 37 Ave. and 54 Ave., on 50 Ave. between 50 St. and 54 St. and on 48 Ave. going onto West Valley Park Road and 45 Ave. between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Dangerous goods are also prohibited to be transported anywhere in the municipality that is not designated as a dangerous goods route. In certain circumstances a special permit can be issued to allow the transportation outside the regulations of the bylaw.

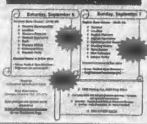

"At the end of the day we will always err on the side of safety when permitting," said Thomson.

The bylaw does not apply to vehicles transporting medical oxygen, which is classified as a dangerous good.

Those violating stipulations of the bylaw will be subject to fines that can be issued by Drayton Valley's bylaw officer, Drayton Valley Community Peace Officers or the RCMP.

Coun. Debra Bossert questioned Thomson on how the information would be distributed to those impacted. He said they were working to be in contact with trucking companies, as well as making the bylaw as accessible as possible. Thomson said he also anticipated meeting with gas stations located within the time restriction zones.

MUSEUM LEASE RENEWED

The Drayton Valley and District Historical Society Museum has secured its location for the next 10 years after the Town of Drayton Valley renewed its lease last week.

The Drayton Valley and District Historical Society has a historical and ongoing lease with the Town of Drayton Valley for the use of lands for the museum.

The terms of the lease have been updated to reflect as recently approved Maintenance Agreement.

The lease is for a 10-year term ending Aug. 1, 2024.

MEETING RESCHEDULED
The next meeting of the Town of Drayton Valley Council has been moved up a week.

Due to the availability of councillors and the ability to make a quorum (a minimum of four councillors), the next council meeting will be on Sept. 16, a week ahead of the original Sept. 17 date.

FUNDING GRANTED
Last week Director of Community Services Annette Driessen told council that Drayton Valley and District PCS has been successful in securing additional funding for its homelessness initiative.

The funding, approximately $344,000 over five years, will allow the community to continue with work on identifying the contributing factors and implementing preventative measures and solutions to rural homelessness.

Watch for more on that story in next week's Western Review.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
ATTENTION ADJACENT LANDOWNERS OF A PORTION OF THE SOUTHWEST 1/4 OF 9-49-7-W5M

This is a public notice advising landowners in the above area that the Council of the Town of Drayton Valley has received application to rezone the lands municipally described as 4503-49 Street, which would change the land use to allow the creation of light commercial uses.

Council gave first reading to By-Law No. 2014/16/0 at its Regular Meeting of Council on July 16, 2014 to adopt the rezoning for a portion of the land described as:

PLAN 084 0074
EXCEPTING THEREOUT ALL MINES AND MINERALS

FROM: R2 - General Residential District
TO: C1 - Central Commercial District

As shown on the accompanying map. A copy of the Bylaw may be examined at the Civic Centre during regular business hours. A Public Hearing for these Bylaws will be held before the Regular Scheduled Meeting of Council, in the Council Chambers at the Drayton Valley Civic Centre, at 5:00PM on September 16, 2014, for the purpose of hearing any objections, recommendations and/or complaints pertaining to the proposed amendments.

Submissions should be submitted in writing prior to the hearing. Those written submissions which have been received before the designated time will be discussed at the meeting before further presentation will be recognized.

Residents are encouraged to attend. Should you have any questions with regard to this proposed Bylaw please contact Jennifer Martin, Planning & Development Officer at the Town of Drayton Valley at 504-2211 or email planning@draytonvalley.ca.

Losing locks for those in need

Local teen shaves head to raise funds for ShelterBox Canada

Lesley Allan
Western Review

In a world of seemingly obsessed with vanity, one local teen has shed light on the needs of others by shaving her head and raising funds to support those in need during times of disaster.

"A lot of people are just kind of shocked," said Jinell Benoit, a 17-year-old student who shaved her head on Aug. 26. "At first they think it's all for cancer."

"It's something a little extreme that people will want to see," she continued saying that it helps to bring attention to the needs of those around the world and the work done by ShelterBox. "So it is a good way to bring in some money, not to sound greedy."

Recently returning from an exchange program in Sweden, through the Rotary Club, Benoit explained that a requirement of the program was that she needed to raise $500 for ShelterBox, an organization that provides emergency shelters and supplies to families in the immediate aftermath of a disaster.

"It's something a little extreme that people will want to see. So it is a good way to bring in some money..."

— Jinell Benoit

Eager to do just that Benoit got to work raising funds but wanted to go above and beyond what was required so she decided to think outside the box.

"Another exchange student gave me the idea," she explained. "She was going to Thailand and she cut off all of her dreadlocks, so I also had the idea of shaving my head for a while so I thought why not make a fundraiser out of it?"

With the support of friends, family, and the community

Benoit's idea proved a great success raising roughly $3,000 by the time she shaved her head last week, enough money to almost purchase three boxes that come supplied with a family tent, blankets, water purification, cooking utensils, a stove, a tool kit, a children's activity pack and other vital items.

"It feels amazing," she shared. "It helps a lot of people. A family of four can comfortably live out of a ShelterBox for months, so it just gives people a second chance, it gives them a home away from home in a sense."

Although extremely happy with what she was able to achieve, there were butterflies in her stomach as she prepared herself for the clippers and her upcoming hairdo, at last week's Rotary meeting.

"I'm a little bit nervous. I mean half of it is gone already, but it's going to be..." Benoit says with a sigh and nervous giggle.

"I think it's definitely a good cause, it does help a lot of people," she shared. "So it feels good to be able to help them out in some way."

To contribute to the cause and help Benoit reach her goal of completing three ShelterBoxes, call 780-898-1744.

On Aug. 20 during a Rotary Club of Drayton Valley meeting, 17-year-old Jinell Benoit had her head shaved by Elaine Jumbo to raise money for ShelterBox Canada. Costing $1,200 each Benoit has so far raised enough to complete nearly three boxes.

Thunder look to garner support of local volunteers

Volunteers an important part of Thunder organization

Lesley Allan
Western Review

In Drayton Valley volunteers have proven to be a vital part of the community, and the foundation under AHL regulations so when there's a loss of places where people can spend their time giving back.

For the Drayton Valley Thunder, they're hoping to tap into the generous nature of the community, as well as Canada's passion for hockey as the organizations reaches out to search of more volunteers.

"In the last 10 years it's kind of been a lot of the same volunteers and they're kind of wanting to transition into watching the games instead of volunteering at every single game," says Erin Hepper, director of sales/marketing/community relations for the Thunder. "So this is why we are needing more volunteers."

According to Hepper volunteers don't just add to the experience of the games when the Thunder play at home in the Omniplex, but rather make the game what it is.

"Volunteers are everything that makes up a hockey game," she says. "We don't have the budget to pay somebody every single game so the volunteers are sort of the heart and the soul of the hockey team, without them there would be no games." Every time the Thunder hit the Omni Ice surface with an opponent on the other bench a minimum of 25 volunteers are needed to fill jobs such as the scoreboard, statistics, security and more.

Although some positions, such as the 50/50 ticket seller as well as the bartender are added services at the games, Hepper says that some are mandatory under AHL regulations so when there's a loss of places where people can spend their time giving back.

"It's never come to that," explains Hepper when it comes to not offering services. "But for the scorekeeper, or the stats, we can get a $10,000 fine from the AHL, and that's just one of them, so it can be up to $10,000. So it's a vital position that we need."

At the moment Hepper says the Thunder have about 25 volunteers to call upon when there is a game, although since this is the number of volunteers needed she says often times board members are needed to fill positions when volunteers are unable to attend.

To help prevent this from happening in the future, Hepper is hoping to build a strong pool of volunteers so there are more to call upon when needed and extra to fall back on during busy times.

"What I would like to have is a large volunteer base so that people only have to do four or five games out of the year instead of doing every single game," she says. "That way it's kind of gives the people that [currently volunteer] every game a chance to watch and not always have to work them, or if they're sick or can't make it, that way we have somebody as a backup."

Aside from asking the general public to look at the possibility of volunteering, Hepper says the Thunder organization is also hoping to work with the school board to see if there is a way to allow students to accumulate their needed volunteer hours by helping out the team.

A great way to get out into the community, Hepper says it's not only a great way for students to give back, but a good way for anyone looking to build a stronger connection to Drayton Valley to get out there and meet people.

"You meet a lot of people," she says. "People here have now become really good friends [because] you see them at the games and you see them out in the community. You just get exposed to so many more people that you might not have known, you get to watch AHL hockey, which is great hockey, and you are helping out your community."

Anyone interested in learning more about the volunteer opportunities within the Drayton Valley Thunder organization can call (780) 542-7845, or stop into the Thunder office located in the main lobby of the Omniplex.

On Aug. 23 the sixth annual Lande Tactical Shoot took place at the Evergreen Shooting Club and saw 40 participants from 15 different areas.

Shooting in remembrance

Memorial shoot continues to find success

Lesley Allan
Western Review

When remembering a friend or loved one it is important to reflect on the good times and to move forward with those memories. For Logan Rode, the loss of a friend inspired him and others to pay tribute to someone that was lost too soon. "It was a memorial shoot for a friend that died," says Rode of the Lande Tactical Shoot (LTS), which was started in memory of Derek Lande. "We just wanted to do something in his honour, he was big into shooting and he was pretty passionate about the sport."

"He was just breaking into it and getting really good at it and that's how we knew him as friends," he continues. "That's how we hung out together, as a group of guys."

On Aug. 23 40 shooters travelled to the Evergreen Shooting Club for the sixth annual LTS, an event that has proven to be as long lasting as the memories of men that inspired the shoot. "It's been huge," says Rode. "The first year we were practically begging people to come to our shoot, and we started out with a really low entrance fee just to get people to show up to it, but now it's huge. Most years we sell out in anywhere from 12 minutes to a couple hours, the shoot is sold out in that one registration day."

A day dedicated to the love of the sport, Rode says a wide variety of shooters come out with ages ranging from 25 to 60. Much like Lande, those attending the event have a passion for precision shooting and it isn't so much about winning but enjoying their time at the range.

"It's not a really serious event, it's more about a day of shooting and friendly competition. It's not meant to be serious competition," Rode explains. "Everybody at the end of the day is supposed to be friends, it doesn't really matter who gets first place or who gets last place."

According to Rode success of the event continues to grow each year proves to be better than the one that preceded it and this year was no different. "It was probably our best year so far," he says. "Just the spread of people that were there, it was everything from our local boys to [ex-military]."

It started out as a local event but it's actually grown into people coming from all over Alberta," Rode continues. "We have a family that comes down every year from High River, and we've also got Calgary, Edmonton and area, so all over Alberta people travel, they camp overnight just for the event."

Prairie berry gets a makeover down south

Saskatoon berries are becoming increasingly popular in the eastern part of the U.S.

Mamta Lulla
Western Review

Is a Saskatoon berry by any other name just as delicious? It would seem so. Saskatoon berries, a prairie delicacy of Canada, are starting to become popular in the U.S., but under a different name.

Saskatoon berries, or Juneberries as they're being called in the northeast part of the U.S., are becoming increasingly popular after being cultivated as a domesticated farm crop by an outreach program at Cornell University.

Area berry farmer Cindy Iverson who operates approximately 12 km south east of Tomahawk, said she was pleased to hear about the expansion of the berry's market but isn't sure about the name "Juneberry".

"It would be good to grow (them) down south but I don't know about Juneberries. I prefer we call it Saskatoon berries," she said.

"It's good to extend the market for the berry in other areas for sure," she added.

In Canada, the berry sets its name from an Anglicized version of the Cree name Mississauqua, miss (plural form) + saqua (plural form) according to the Prairie Hermetics Physiochemical Services website (www.prairieelements.ca), referenced by the Saskatoon Berry Council of Canada.

White Juneberry may be more palatable for American consumers, nothing will change for Canada.

"It's just a small region using that particular name. In Canada, we will always keep it Saskatoon berries. We won't change it," said Saskatoon Berry Council of Canada President Sandra Purdy.

The City of Saskatoon derived its name from the fruit, which grew in abundance along the banks of the South Saskatchewan River, around 1882, according to the web site.

Meanwhile, the berry has been a wild fruit in the eastern part of the U.S. for centuries and always known as Juneberries said Jim Ochterski, agriculture issues leader at the Cornell Cooperative Extension.

Now they are looking to bring it out of the wild and into the domestic market. "Part of my job is to help farmers introduce new crops," he said.

"It's good to extend the market for the berry in other areas for sure," she added.

In Canada, the berry

In Canada we will always keep it Saskatoon berries. We won't change it.

Saskatoon Berry Council of Canada President Sandra Purdy

Due to the project, Ochterski said they have 50 farms of the berry in the northeastern United States and the demand they have cultivated is so high that they can't fill it.

"We don't have enough to supply one grocery store, much less to supply grocery chains," he said, confirming the berry that the U.S. imports from Canada are frozen after harvested and the consumers in the country want fresh produce. "If they could export (fresh berries) with all the evidence I have, I believe it would sell rather quickly, but the catch is now people are familiar with Juneberry (as the name) he added.

"I would prefer a more conspicuous name, if the package could be double labelled with Saskatoon/Juneberries," he said.

He has made a request of adding the Juneberries name to the box to the Saskatoon Berry Council of Canada.

"I offered the suggestion and I was told they will look into it, although with reluctance because Saskatoon berries are iconic in the Canadian prairie culture," he said.

"My emphasis is that we're not asking for renaming. I would like producers to understand that we call this berry by a different name and that's an important part of marketing," he said.

Ochterski believes there is a high demand for the fruit in the U.S. for the short term — around eight years — until their own production catches up with the high demand.

He has been contacted by distributors, grocery chains and restaurants but said the "production is too low to meet the demand that we've created."

Meanwhile, Iverson believes that the two different names for the same fruit might confuse people.

"It could be confusing because people would be thinking what's the difference between Juneberries and Saskatoon berries," she said.

"My emphasis is that we're not asking for

ALARMS REMAIN

A CONSTANT Over the past two weeks (from Aug. 13-27) the Drayton Valley/Braceau County Fire Services have received seven alarm calls, all of which turned out to be false. Four of those alarm calls were residential, one was at a local hotel and a local construction site had two alarms in two days.

The fire services were dispatched to five other incidents during the two-week period as well.

Around 1:30 p.m. on Aug. 14 firefighters from Station No. 1 in Lodgepole and Station No. 3 in Drayton Valley were called to reports of a vehicle fire in the vicinity of Range Road 91 and Twp. Road 465.

When they arrived the vehicle was fully involved, police were on scene and the driver had fled the scene.

Firefighters were called to another vehicle fire, this one shortly after 3 p.m. on Aug. 19 on Hwy. 22 and Twp. Road 562. However, their response was cancelled before crews arrived on scene.

Medical issues are believed to have resulted in a collision on Aug. 20 in Lodgepole. The fire services were dispatched to a vehicle that had driven off the road in the area of 50 Ave. and 46 St. in the hamlet.

On Aug. 23 members from Station No. 2 in Breton were called to get up a landing zone for STARS in the area of Hwy. 39 and Range Road 45. A landing zone was established on the highway for the air ambulance to lift a patient.

That same day members from Station No. 3 were on Range Road 85, south of Twp. Road 492 assisting EMS personnel at the scene of a motorcycle collision.

BE BACK TO SCHOOL SAFE

Sept. 2 marks the beginning of a new school year for students, teachers, administrators and parents. It also marks a return of school speed zones and a need for a refresher of the rules, to make sure everyone gets to and from school safely.

Students who are getting back in the school routine or who are new to school, should be reminded of the importance of safety when walking or biking to school. It's a good idea for parents or guardians to go with students on the route at least once or twice to demonstrate the proper precautions.

Among those precautions should be a reminder to children to always walk on sidewalks and cross at intersections. Before crossing the road children need to stop, look in all directions for traffic or other hazards and then walk, not run, across the street. If parents don't walk to school with their children it's a good idea to use the "buddy system" and find another friend or classmate in the same neighbourhood so they can walk together.

Those who are biking or skateboarding to school should always be wearing helmets. When crossing the road they too need to stop, look in all directions and then walk their bike or carry their skateboard across the road.

One of the most important things for adults to stress to children is for them to always be aware of their surroundings and to pay attention to what's going on around them, especially traffic.

Photo submitted

The local Jumpstart program got a boost from Lightstream Resources last week when it was presented with a donation. Sponsored nationally by Canadian Tire, the Jumpstart program helps families with the cost of having children participate in organized sports or recreational activities. Families can apply for the program through their school's wellness worker. Information will also be available at next week's Community Registration Night on Sept. 8. Money donated in the area stays to help families in the region. For more information on the Jumpstart program go online to <http://jumpstart.canadiantire.ca/en/>

After telling his parents all summer that he wanted to set up a lemonade stand, eight-year-old Ryland Fyson, right, finally set up shop last week. When asked what he wanted to do with any money raised Ryland told his parents he wanted it to go to Cancer for Orphans. After mulling the stand on his own the first day Ryland recruited friend Logan Rasmussen, left, to help. In just two half days the stand raised $200 to donate.

Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders impact us all

In Canada one in every 100 births is impacted by FASD

McMan Youth, Family & Community Services
Special to the Western Review

September 9 will mark the 15th anniversary of International Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD) Awareness Day. FASD Awareness Day was created to alert people to the importance of not drinking alcohol during pregnancy and the need to provide effective services for individuals and families impacted by these disorders. The McMan Youth, Family and Community Services FASD Outreach program will mark this special occasion with a mock talk campaign this is supported by several of the licensed establishments in Drayton Valley throughout September. FASD Awareness Month, to create awareness and educate people on FASD. Free mocktalls will be provided at supporting establishments to all pregnant women during the month of September. Look for these throughout Drayton Valley.

Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD) is caused when a woman drinks alcohol during pregnancy. FASD is common. It is costly. And it is 100 per cent preventable. In Alberta, every year as many as nine in every 1,000 babies are born in Alberta with prenatal alcohol exposure, it is estimated that about 450 babies are born with FASD each year. The Government of Alberta estimates that there are more than 36,000 individuals living with FASD in Alberta.

According to the Government of Alberta, the estimated cost of FASD in Alberta is $927.5 million per year. The lifetime cost for one individual with FASD is estimated to be $1.12 million for medical, educational and residential care. Nationally, FASD affects one of every 100 live births, this is about 1 per cent of the population. That's more than autism and down syndrome combined. The annual cost of FASD in an adult is estimated at $7.6 billion. FASD is the umbrella term used to describe a range of disabilities that may include physical birth defects and health problems including developmental delays, learning disabilities, memory problems, as well as difficulties in communication, feelings and understanding consequence due to irreversible brain damage caused by prenatal alcohol exposure. Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD) can only be caused by drinking alcohol during pregnancy. FASD is a lifelong disability. A child with FASD grows up to be an adult with FASD.

If you are pregnant or planning to become pregnant the safest choice is to drink no alcohol at all. For more information on Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders please call Marna Russell with the McMan Youth Family & Community Services 1AND Outreach program at 780-542-2224.

Local survivor conquers roads in 225 km bike ride

Special to the Western Review

August 9 and 10 were epic for Linda MacKinnon. She and 17 other riders united in a powerful movement to help achieve a world free from cancer.

The Enbridge Ride to Conquer Cancer, made up of riders, crew, volunteers, supporters and even traffic, has become more than a two-day cycling adventure of just more than 225 kilometres. It has become an annual journey to allow us to continue to make impactful investments that matter and improve the lives of Albertans facing cancer. It is an inspirational ride as well, as individual riders, each with their own personal story, come together for a common cause — to support world-renowned cancer research in our province.

Riding in the Enbridge Ride to Conquer Cancer is an annual event for MacKinnon who began with the inaugural ride in 2009. After riding for three years MacKinnon herself was diagnosed with cancer — through aggressive ongoing treatment for one year MacKinnon is now a survivor and began riding once more in 2013 and again this year — proudly displaying the yellow survivor flag on her bike — and the coveted 'gold helmet' presented to all riders having completed five or more years on the ride.

This year's route leaving Canada Olympic Park near Calgary travelled south and west through Bragg Creek / Turner Valley / Pridis / Black Diamond areas and in part of the Stage One of the Tour of Alberta cycling event. Collectively through commitment and efforts the 2014 Alberta ride raised $7.9 million dollars for the Alberta Cancer Foundation — the largest philanthropic funder of cancer research in Alberta. These critical funds will change the lives of cancer patients and their families by allowing investment in programs, research and care that will close the gap faster between diagnosis, better treatment and improved quality of life. The impact of the ride goes beyond the dollars raised, with so many special moments and so much positive energy. This year MacKinnon joined and rode with the team One Aim. With 130 teammates the One Aim Team was second overall raising $429,000 (Team Enbridge was first raising more than $700,000).

One Aim has raised more than one million dollars for the Ride to Conquer Cancer since its inception also in 2009. The team slogan is 'We have One Aim: Conquer Cancer.' Who is One Aim? They are survivors, caregivers, researchers, relatives and indignant objectors to the impact of cancer. They are all shapes, sizes and ages. They all have a story to tell. The purpose of One Aim is to help prepare riders for the

CAUSE FOR CRITTERS PET OF THE WEEK

Meet Aurora (left), the mom and Mica (right), her baby girl. Even though they were very scared when they arrived at the shelter, they are finding it well. Aurora loves to be petted by people and she doesn't mind other cats. Mica doesn't have any siblings and is learning how to play from the other kittens at the shelter. These cats can be adopted together or separately. You can find them at the Cause for Critters animal shelter. Bay 85-5450-55 St. www.causeforcritters.ca, or 780-888-7297. Don't miss our garage sale on Sept. 6 at 4455-36 St.

is this your DREAM HOME?

50517 RGE RD 73

This home was custom ordered originally & comes with lots of extras including the upgraded windows that open inwards for cleaning. The services are all brand new! The owners wanted you to have the best of appliances. They have installed brand new stainless steel appliances & they have never been used. The Gas stove has the double oven for the Chef in the family. Enjoy the brightness of the home with all the skylights. The shingles were just done, there is a 12 x 48 solarium covered deck, new carpet in bedroom & living room, the baseboard & crown moulding are upgraded, mirrored closet doors throughout, granite sink, raised breakfast bar on the island, newer counter & tile backsplash in the kitchen. The master bedroom suite is awesome! There is the jacuzzi tub, bathroom cabinets with upper & lower cabinets, separate shower & again lots of lighting. The drywalled living room has a nice gas fireplace with mantle and hearth for cozy nights. Enjoy the valley view! Check this one out. It's awesome!
